Electronics Recycling

Wisconsin’s electronics recycling law bans several types of electronics from landfills and incineration as of September 1, 2010. This went into effect to keep mercury and other heavy metals found in most electronic devices from reaching the groundwater. The law also requires the manufacturers of electronics to recycle 80% of the electronics they sell in WI each year. Consumers can check a list of “collectors” in the area on the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources website (www.dnr.state.wi.us).

In Waushara County, the banned items can be dropped off for recycling at the office of Waushara County Parks and Solid Waste
